

MONKEY PAYS FINE FOR OWNER

After Raising High Jinks in Riverside Drive and Causing Firemen to Be Called Out, Jocko Goes to Court.

SASSES A POLICEMAN,
BUT BOWS TO THE JUDGE.

Master Unable to Produce the Full $2 to Pay Fine, but the "Monk" Helps Him Out of Difficulty.

A squeaky little monkey snatched off his dinky red cap and bowed to the magistrate when the case of Giuseppe Degitto was called in the West Side Court to-day.

The monkey, like its master, was charged with disorderly conduct. Right on fashionable Riverside Drive, at One Hundred and Eighty street, the monkey climbed to the fourth story of a fine residence and the Fire Department had to be called out to get the little fellow down.

A Swedish hired girl went to the window to water a geranium just as Jocko stuck his face over the ledge. The girl uttered a wild scream and dropped her watering pot. The pot struck an Irish policeman sauntering along the sidewalk on his helmet. His dignity was sorely offended.

"Phew! th' h—!" ejaculated the policeman. And when he looked up and saw the monkey blinking and chirping at him, his only thought was to have the law on the "monk."

Ordered to Come Down.

"Come down out of that!" he yelled, flourishing his club.

"Q-r-r-r-k! q-r-r-r-k!" answered the "monk," making funny faces—though the funniest face it could make wasn't quite as funny as the policeman's.

The policeman told the organ grinder to bring the monkey down. Giuseppe threw up several yards of the spaghetti talk, but the monkey merely answered with a few fancy steps on the window ledge and a derisive doffing of his red cap.

"Bada monk," said the organ grinder to the policeman. "Nothing to do."

The policeman, storming and stamping, put his finger on his badge of authority, but Jocko merely winked and gave an imitation of Eddie Girard.

The policeman felt this was an affront not only to his authority, but to his race, and without a moment's hesitation he walked to the fire-alarm box and sent in a still alarm. In a few moments the hook and ladder company from West Ninety-seventh street came dashing around the corner followed by a crowd of men and boys joyously shouting "Fire!"

Firemen After the Monkey.

Jocko was surprised. But he evidently felt that as long as the Department had been called out it might just as well have a little exercise, so instead of coming down he clambered up another story, and nearly scared a French maid into fits.

A sixty-foot ladder was thrown up and a fireman climbed after the monkey. While the policeman leaned against a lamp-post in an attitude of triumph, at first Jocko was shy, but when he suddenly recognized the fireman as one of his steady customers he leaped gladly into his arms and put his paws lovingly about the brave man's neck.

This really took the edge off the policeman's revenge, but the "copper" had his innings later on in court, when he gave Jocko a character that wouldn't even go to an employment agency.

Jocko, however, defended and took off his hat to the magistrate every other minute, but justice is stern and the "monk's" time to go came when the magistrate imposed a fine of $2.

Was Short One Cent.

Giuseppe, with the low moan of one badly stung, got busy with both hands. He searched all his pockets. But all that he could dig up was one hundred and ninety-nine pennies.

With grim, relentless justice, in the form of a clerk who needed a shave, the magistrate ordered Giuseppe to pay the fine. He wept, turned to the "monk" and muttered something in Italian.

Pushing his hat over the ear, Jocko looked attentively. Then he nodded understandingly, fished in his semi-military clothes and produced the needed penny!

WALL CAVED IN;
3 MEN INJURED

Workmen Engaged in Tearing Down Building in West One Hundred and Eighteenth St.

Hurt—Contractor Arrested.

While a gang of men under the direction of Lazarus Cohen, a contractor, were tearing down the building at No. 100 West One Hundred and Eighteenth street this afternoon a wall caved in. Three of the workmen were injured.

Their names are Morris Sencovitch, of No. 100 Pelham avenue; Finkel Korinick, of No. 22 Division street; and Albert Balaban, of No. 24 Norfolk street. They were taken to the J. E. White Hospital, where examination showed that their injuries were not serious.

Cohen, the contractor, was locked up at the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station.

RACE RIOT IN GUNS AND AXES

Clubs Used, Too, in Williamsburg Tenement, and One Woman May Die in Hospital from a Fractured Skull.

ITALIANS AND GERMANS
FOUGHT IN BITTER FEUD.

There Were Other Casualties—Woman Prisoner Held Without Bail Pending Death or Recovery of Victim.

One woman in St. Catherine's Hospital suffering from a fractured skull, with little hope for recovery; her husband with one side of his face blown off; a small boy with a gunshot wound in his leg, and others suffering from minor hurts are the results of a feud in the five-story double tenement No. 118 George street, Williamsburg, last night.

Until a few months ago this tenement was occupied exclusively by Italians. Then some Germans moved in and international differences became more and more bellicose. Last night there was an open rupture and a fight which ended only after the police reserves of the Hamburg avenue station had been called out.

The leader of the Italian forces is Joseph Teresa, thirty-seven years old. He was helped by his wife, Maria. Marrying the Italian tenants in the house, they camped in the hallways waiting for the Germans to appear. The head and front of the Teutons is George Santos. He, too, was assisted by his wife.

Clash Came at Midnight.

The opposing forces came together about midnight. Teresa was armed with a shotgun, his wife with a hammer. As far as is known the Germans had no firearms, although they were well equipped with clubs and sticks.

After the first clash several shots were heard and great excitement prevailed in the neighborhood. People rushed out of their houses and the street became choked with people.

The fight raged inside and the outsiders did not mix until the arrival of the police. After the smoke of battle cleared Mrs. Santos was found lying in a heap, her skull fractured. Who was responsible for her injuries is not known.

Mrs. Teresa had been seen carrying a hammer. She had been seen carrying a hammer. She had been seen carrying a hammer.

Mrs. Teresa Found Injuring.

When the reserves arrived and had heard the incoherent statements of all involved a search was made for the Teresa family. Joseph had escaped over the roof, but Mrs. Teresa was caught in hiding. She was arrested and taken to the Hamburg avenue station.

Mrs. Teresa was arraigned before Magistrate Nauman to-day and held without bail. The physician at St. Catherine's Hospital gave out such gloomy reports about Mrs. Santos's condition that no specific charge will be made against the arrested woman until she is definitely known whether Mrs. Santos will die or not.

The house on George street shows every sign of the battle. Some of the windows were blown out and the walls and hallways were generally out of shape. A volunteer fire brigade of three policemen are now on guard there.

BEAVERS SWEARS HE GOT NO BRIBE

Former Superintendent of Salaries of the Post-Office Department Goes on Stand and Denies Charges Against Him.

George W. Beavers, former Superintendent of the Division of Salaries and Allowances of the Post-Office Department, who was indicted in Washington some months ago in connection with the postal frauds, went on the witness stand before Commissioner Benedict in Brooklyn to-day as a voluntary witness in his fight to prevent his being taken to Washington for trial.

The indictment on which the Government seeks Beavers' removal is in connection with his alleged bribery by a book typewriter concern to influence the sale of these typewriters to the Post-Office Department. Beavers has not been on the stand before and the court-room was crowded when it was announced that he would testify.

Beavers frankly admitted that he had transactions with W. Scott Towers, a representative of the typewriter manufacturers, but said they were entirely of a personal nature. He said that Towers was a good man to know as he had an extensive acquaintance among the Washington banks. He denied that the postal frauds were connected with his alleged bribery by Towers.

States District Attorney Young asked Beavers if he personally had a bank account in Washington between October, 1901, and July, 1902. Beavers' lawyer would not let him answer. He said that Beavers was not a volunteer witness, but that he was straightened out certain things, but could not be cross-examined. The Commission on the twenty-odd motions that he made was denied.

Several minor witnesses were examined and then an adjournment was taken until to-morrow. Lawyer Seabury, for Beavers, made a long argument for the discharge of his client before adjournment, but every suggestion of the twenty-odd motions that he made was denied.

NINETY-SIX GRADUATES.

Public School No. 184 Turns Out Big Class.

A class of ninety-six pupils—thirty-three girls and sixty-three boys—were graduated to-day from Public School No. 184, in One Hundred and Sixty-fourth street near Fifth Avenue. The school, which is the largest in New York, has 3,000 pupils.

The honor pupils were Marie Bayler, Milton Acker and Alfred Van Baalen. District Superintendent Seth Stewart presided at the commencement exercises. Rev. Dr. Pilton addressed the boys and girls.

Mr. C. E. Kidd is the principal of the school.

Prior to the exercises a fire drill was held and the school was cleared in less than three minutes.

Frank Moss Still Very Ill.

Former Police Commissioner Frank Moss, the reformer, who was reported as dying in Los Angeles some weeks ago, has returned to his home, No. 808 East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, this city. Mr. Moss is still very ill and Dr. Booth, who is attending him, has ordered him to the country for the summer.
